PROCESS OF BOX MAKING

DESIGNING

Design the box according to the specific requirements and dimensions provided by the client or based on the intended use of the box.

MATERIAL SELECTION

Once the design is finalized, the appropriate materials are selected based on factors such as strength, durability, appearance, and cost.

Lightweight boxes: 200 GSM to 300 GSM may be suitable

Medium-weight boxes: 300 GSM to 400 GSM is commonly used

Heavy-duty boxes: 400 GSM to 600 GSM or higher may be used.

Paper used for box: Duplex Boards, Recycled paper, Solid bleached sulphate (SBS) board, Kraft paper, Chipboard - Rigid paper, Corrugated cardboard

PRINTING

Box design includes printing, such as branding, product information, or decorative elements, the design is printed onto the selected materials using printing techniques: Digital printing, Flexography, Lithography, Gravure, Screen printing

CUTTING

The printed or plain sheets of paper or cardboard are then cut into the required shapes and sizes using cutting machines such as die-cutters or flatbed cutters.

SCORING AND CREASING

After cutting, the sheets are scored and creased along the fold lines using scoring machines. This creates precise folds and ensures that the box can be easily folded and assembled later in the process.

FOLDING AND GLUING

The scored and creased sheets are folded along the fold lines to form the basic shape of the box. Depending on the design, the box may be assembled using adhesive tapes, glues, or by interlocking tabs and slots.

FINISHING TOUCHES

Once the box is assembled, any additional finishing touches such as adding inserts, labels, stickers, or embossing/debossing are applied to enhance the appearance and functionality of the box.

QUALITY CONTROL:

Throughout the manufacturing process, quality control measures are implemented to ensure that the boxes meet the specified standards in terms of dimensions, print quality, structural integrity, and overall appearance.

PACKAGING AND SHIPPING

Finally, the finished boxes are packaged and prepared for shipping to the customer or for distribution to retail outlets.
